BIO

Amy has litigated disputes for over a decade. As a trial lawyer, she recognizes and appreciates the benefits of early resolution and has significant experience mediating, settling, and streamlining disputes. She believes that even the most complicated cases can, and should, fit into clear concepts to utilize for successful outcomes.

Her practice focuses on construction law, with cases ranging from straightforward contract disputes to high-stakes, complex claims with multiple parties. She routinely handles, among other issues, cases involving construction defects, Federal Miller Act payment bond claims, performance bonds, mechanic's liens, and delay and impact claims. She tries cases in state and federal court in Virginia (including, regularly, the "Rocket Docket" United States District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia), the District of Columbia, and before arbitration tribunals and the Board of Contract Appeals. She also guides federal contractors through the process of preparing construction claims for submission to the federal government, from the REA stage through appeals.

In addition to litigation, she drafts, revises, negotiates, and guides clients through construction contracts in the private sector involving large-scale commercial, residential, and mixed-use projects.

In 2005, she graduated magna cum laude with a BA in International Affairs from the Elliott School of International Affairs at The George Washington University, where she was in the Honors Program and a member of Phi Beta Kappa. She then obtained her J.D. from Cornell Law School in 2008 with a concentration in public law, where she served as a notes editor for the International Law Journal, and was selected for an Honors Fellowship (teaching assistant role).

She has been recognized in Best Lawyers: Ones to Watch in America in its inaugural issue in 2021 and 2022 and was selected as a Super Lawyers Rising Star from 2015-2019.
