BIO

Originally from California, Clark joined Werther & Mills in 2022. His practice includes civil litigation, white-collar defense, trade and telecommunications regulatory compliance, government investigations, construction law, and transactional work. He also has experience advising clients with local land use and municipal appeals. Dispute resolution drives Clark's practice, and his versatile experience allows Clark to advise clients across multiple disciplines.

Before entering private practice, Clark spent over a decade on Capitol Hill, including service as a Congressional Chief of Staff. While on the Hill, Clark was well known for his leadership on trade policy. He was an original co-author of the Foreign Investment Risk Review Modernization Act, which was signed into law in 2018 and modernized the Committee on Foreign Investment in the United States (CFIUS). Clark also owned and managed his own consulting firm and has experience as a small business entrepreneur.

In addition to his law practice, Clark is regarded as a national security policy expert with experience leading initiatives for senior Members of the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence and working as a professional staff in the Army's acquisition, logistics, and technology office. Clark has spoken internationally on trade, security, and financial services issues on several occasions and guest lectured students at the National Defense University.

Clark is licensed to practice law in Maryland and the District of Columbia. He is also barred in several federal jurisdictions and authorized to submit CFIUS and export control filings before the Treasury and Commerce Departments. Clark obtained a J.D. from the George Washington University Law School, an M.A. in Irregular Warfare from the U.S. Naval War College, and a B.A. from the University of Southern California. He is a former collegiate sailor and has been in a variety of local bands, both as a guitarist and keyboard player. He lives in D.C. with his wife, Kathryn, and their little puppies, Bradley and Tilly.
